

The Glocal Program in International Development

invites submissions for the program's 10th anniversary global conference in international development:

Global Inequality, Local Knowledge

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

June 22, 2021

We welcome the submission of original, topical papers in the fields of development studies, anthropology, sociology, international relations, political science, cultural studies, migration studies, area studies, geography, history, environmental studies and related disciplines. The papers should focus on one of four interrelated core themes of the Glocal program:

1. Political ecology and sustainable environmental management: between global policies and local knowledge;
2. Global migration, local communities and (in)security;
3. Gender, inequality and local initiatives;
4. Global Health and the weaving of community networks.

Deadline for abstract submission:

March 1, 2021

Submissions should include the paper's title & an abstract of up to 250 words, and be addressed to the Glocal program's academic committee:

glocal@savion.huji.ac.il

 The conference will be held either online or at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem's Mount Scopus Campus pending Covid-19 related university regulations.
